IDology Inc. names Dancu president

SBN Staff | 10:39 am | January 27, 2006(<https://sbnonline.com/2006/01/27/>)

John Dancu has joined IDology Inc. as president and CEO.

Dancu is a seasoned technology executive with expertise in managing rapidly growing companies.

"John is a successful serial entrepreneur with a proven track record of driving rapid growth and building shareholder value," says Raye Croghan, IDology spokesperson. "He has the experience, talent and vision to continue to build IDology's market success and leading technology. On behalf of all of us here at IDology, I want to express how excited we are with John's desire to join our team and move the company into its next phase of growth."

Dancu worked as president and chief operating officer of Synchrologic Inc. and guided it in its rapid growth and its sale to Intellisync Inc. He also worked as president and COO of Netzip Inc.

Prior to Netzip, Dancu worked as COO and chief financial officer of K&G Men's Center Inc. During his five years there, he led the company through growth, overseeing its initial public offering and helping to complete K&G's merger with the Men's Warehouse in 1999. From 1985 to 1995, he was an investment banker at the Robinson-Humphrey Co.

"I am excited about the opportunity to lead IDology," says Dancu. "IDology has a talented and dedicated team, excellent customers, technology leadership, financial strength and a leading market position from which to continue its ongoing, rapid expansion in the age and identity verification market."

NAVIGANT CONSULTING INC.
