Unlocking email excellence and innovation for everyone

We come by our roots honestly. Our founder and CEO, Matt Harris, started playing with code and making websites when he was just a kid. During college, he worked as a contract developer to pay his way. So our story begins in earnest...

Matt couldn't help but notice his clients all shared common ground. First off, they had to send email to communicate with their customers. Traditionally, those emails lived in source code. In other words, 'the great programming beyond'.

A common setup, but a problematic one. Simple changes, like copy edits and color swaps, had to go through Matt. And the more he worked on email, the more he realized that created a disconnect. A gap between the people who want to send email, and the developers creating it.

Matt being Matt he started working on a solution: An agile no-code email builder. But more than that would solve for all the problems he'd encountered — making templates responsive, collaboration frictionless, and freeing up marketers to go beyond the ABCs.

We embrace curiosity

We empower every Dyspatchio to question assumptions and share their unique insights. Everyone can bring fresh eyes to old problems, and we actively seek perspectives from our newest team members to long-standing Dyspatchios. This culture of curiosity makes us innovative, humble, collaborative, and focused on continual learning.

We aim for 100% impact

Focusing on impact means taking ownership of the success of our tasks, working with urgency where it counts, and keeping every project aligned with the big picture. Regardless of their role, all Dyspatchios work together to drive company success.

We are Email+ experts

We know there are some bad emails out there, and as #emailgeeks, we help our customers build great emails efficiently and with fewer surprises. While email will always be our #1, we've expanded to the many personalized communications that marketers send their customers - from SMS to push to voice notifications and whatever comes next!

We go above and beyond to understand what our customers need, deliver solutions that exceed their expectations, and build lasting partnerships by treating their challenges as our own. We also Care Deeply about building a high-performing and supportive team culture that fosters collaboration, and enables each of us to build a fulfilling career at Dyspatch.

Dyspatch respectfully acknowledges the Lekwungen and WSÁNEĆ People, whose unceded territories we live and work on. We would also like to express our gratitude to all of the Coast Salish people as we continue to work and live as guests on their lands.

We recognize that acts of colonization created many inequities for First Nations, Inuit, and Métis people. As a company, we acknowledge that we have a responsibility to work towards reconciliation and to remain open to suggestions and consultations, especially with Indigenous communities.
