The US-headquartered company has raised $38m in total to grow its Dublin and US offices and expand in the financial services sector.

Fraud detection company Inscribe has raised $25m in Series B funding to fuel its growth and hiring plans.

The funding round was led by Threshold Ventures and joined by existing investors Crosslink Capital, Foundry, and Uncork Capital. The round also included angel investors including Box co-founder Dillon Smith and Intercom co-founder Des Traynor.

The San Francisco-headquartered company reports a four-times increase in its monthly usage year-over-year, along with three-times growth in annual recurring revenue.

“Technologies that make what’s invisible, visible have always moved society forward in very powerful and important ways,” Burke said. “Our mission at Inscribe is to create a fair and efficient financial services ecosystem.

“We’ve started by building best-in-class document fraud detection so companies can uncover the risk intelligence they need to build digital trust with customers. And this is only the beginning.”

Threshold Ventures co-founder and managing partner Josh Stein said Inscribe’s risk intelligence service could be one of the “most significant innovations” for the financial services industry since the shift to online banking.

“We’re impressed by Inscribe’s growth and vision,” Stein said. “They have a team of experienced executives, engineers and data scientists who are building industry-changing solutions to help businesses grow responsibly.”
